The International Alliance to Combat Ocean

Acidification invites subnational, national and civil society leaders who are working to support coastal communities impacted by ocean acidification to come together to discuss actionable steps to address changing ocean conditions.

Governments will share policy solutions they have developed within their regions and across climate agreement frameworks through "OA Action Plans." COP24 delegations will also announce their commitment to join the OA Alliance.

The OA Alliance has 70+ members, including national governments, states, provinces, tribal nations, and cities, along with research institutions, businesses and NGOs, and welcomes your participation. The OA Alliance is building on the momentum of the historic Paris Climate Agreement by taking actions to protect the health of the oceans and address the impacts of climate related changing ocean conditions on our economies and coastal communities.
